Water Supplies.

There have been no new sources of water supply, the London, Midland and Scottish Railway Company continue to supply Wolverton and New Bradwell with water, and the Council are still the undertakers for Stony Stratford and the Lower and Middle Wealds at Calverton.

The London Midland and Scottish Railway Company still ammoniate and chlorinate at their waterworks, the water was maintained at a high bacteriological standard. The drought seriously affected the supply which caused some anxiety.

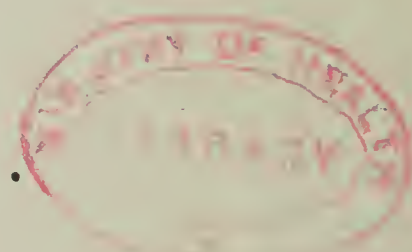

At the Stony Stratford Waterworks the water is still chlorinated. The water was maintained at a very satisfactory standard, and on analysis showed no signs of pollution. The water supply was well maintained during most of the year, but the yield showed a rapid falling off in December, 1943, when the supply to the consumers had to be restricted.
